

Ian Boughton was an expressive Cascada, I enjoyed his portrayal. The underlying charm and humour showed in his face.

Sue Wookey as Praskowia and Claire Moore as Sylviane completed the main principal line up.

Paul Kerwill as Pritschitsch, Clive Wheeler as Bogdanowitsch and Roy Bride as St Brioche made up the contingent of men attached to the Baron.

The ensemble and Grisettes added to the general liveliness of the production.

I was interested that the Director had brought out much more humour in this version, which gave it dimension and interest.

The cast sang well, and the ensemble numbers were lively.

All in all an interesting and energetic version of an old favourite, with some well-sung performances from the various cast members.
